

SHOT FOR A BURGLAR

Millionaire's Son Has Bullet in His Lung.

TRIED TO ENTER INN WINDOW

Clayton French, Harvard Graduate and Clubman, Is Dangerously Wounded by W. B. Audenreid, Who Mistook Him for a Midnight Marauder—Injured Man May Die.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 29.—Clayton B. French, clubman, and son of the millionaire Harry B. French, of the firm of Smith, Kline & French Company, chemists, was shot in mistake for a burglar by his friend, W. B. Audenreid, Jr., stock broker, at the Montgomery Inn, Bryn Mawr, yesterday. The physicians are afraid to probe for the bullet, which entered his lungs through his back, until the young man gains a little more strength.

His condition is very critical. After the shooting, which took place at 1 o'clock in the morning, when French was trying to enter the inn, where both lived, he showed remarkable nerve in concealing his painful and serious condition from the other guests.

Aroused by the shots, these guests rushed to the windows and doors to ascertain the cause of the shooting. Not wishing to unduly alarm any one, Mr. French, who had been assisted to his feet by W. B. Franklin, walked quietly to his room, giving onlookers the impression that he was unhurt.

Young French, who is a Harvard graduate, twenty-four years old, and unmarried, had been spending the night in this city with two friends, one of whom, Mr. Franklin, went out with him to Bryn Mawr to pass the night.

Discovered by Woman.

Arriving at the hotel, Mr. French found he had lost his latch key, rang the bell, got no response, and then tried to get in a second-story window by climbing the porch.

Audenreid awoke, heard a noise, looked out and saw a dark figure trying to raise his window from the outside.

Mrs. Audenreid also awoke, and screaming at the sight, when her husband started a revolver and shot at French, the supposed burglar, who was standing at the edge of the porch, and fell headlong 12 feet to the ground below.

A mounted police officer heard the shot, galloped up, yelled to Audenreid not to fire again, and ran to the wounded man, over whom his friend, Franklin, was bending. Then French's identity was discovered by the others.

FLORENCE ILARIO ON TRIAL

Italian Girl Says that Her Victim Robbed and Deserted Her.

Somerville, N. J., Oct. 29.—The trial of Miss Florence Ilario for shooting and killing Alexander Dipaulo, a hotel man and contractor, of Raritan, on June 2 last, was begun to-day in the Somerset Court, before Justice Abram Garretson, and Judge Louis H. Schenck. Prosecutors John F. Roger is assisted by Nelson Y. Dungan. Clark and Case are defending the woman, who is accused of murder in the first degree.

The defendant appeared in court attired in a brown tailor-made suit. The wife and several small children of the murdered man also occupied seats in the courtroom. They were dressed in deep black.

The jury was drawn without much difficulty after a number of challenges had been made by both sides.

Miss Ilario is a first cousin to Dipaulo's wife. She formerly kept a fruit store in Raritan. About two months before the shooting of Dipaulo and the woman disappeared from Raritan about the same time.

They returned a few weeks later. The woman said Dipaulo had persuaded her to dispose of her business and draw all her money from the bank, amounting to $12,000, and to go away with him, promising her that they would always live together. On their return to Raritan, Dipaulo deserted Miss Ilario.

OFFERS BLOOD TO SAVE LIFE.

Instructor in Naval Academy Keeps His Vow Made Years Ago.

Newark, N. J., Oct. 29.—It was learned to-day that the man who offered a quart of his blood to save the life of Frank Percy, who is lying seriously ill in St. James' Hospital here from the effects of a fall, was Vicente Garcia Valdez, an instructor at the Annapolis Naval Academy. Mr. Valdez did not desire his name to become known, but his identity was discovered to-day. His offer has not been accepted.

Back of the offer is an interesting story. Years ago Mr. Valdez's mother was seriously ill, and her son made a vow that if she recovered he would do some act of charity on the anniversary of that day, October 29, every year. This year Mr. Valdez resolved to offer himself in the hope of saving Mr. Percy's life.

CZOLGOSZ CALLED A HERO.

Cleveland Anarchists Commemorate Day of His Electrocution.

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 29.—To-day was Czolgosz's day in the anarchist calendar, commemorating the anniversary of the death of President McKinley's assassin. Cleveland reds celebrated with speeches, while beer flowed. Czolgosz was lauded as a hero by many of the orators at the meetings in the settlements near the city where anarchists have their quarters. In the city there were no demonstrations, as police interference prevented. Persons who knew the youth told of his life.

At the home of the Czolgosz family, a little cottage on Osmore avenue, the aged father of the assassin and his brothers said they were trying to forget the awful tragedy which has disgraced them. The picture of the boy who was electrocuted at Auburn prison five years ago was not draped.

52 KNOWN DEAD; SEVEN ARE MISSING.

perfectly, and the twisted and torn rail which caused the disaster acted exactly as they said it should act. They declared that it must have been a broken flange on one of the wheels, or something which dropped from one of the trucks that caused the rail on the draw to be torn from its position, thereby throwing the train upon the ties.

But the coroner and his jurors, who are men carefully selected for their high type of integrity, could not see how this explanation was "mechanically possible."

For between the end of the rail on the solid span and the end of the ripped out rail on the draw there would have been only three-quarters of an inch of space had the latter rail been in its proper place when the train rolled upon it.

How a broken flange could have caused this to tear away from a solid box in which it was automatically confined, when in proper position, no investigator could see. It should be pointed out, however, that it was made clear how anything falling from a truck could have ripped out the rail.

If the heavy length of track was mated with the length of the solid span, nothing thicker than a man's thumb could have fallen between them and caused one to be separated from the other.

But they were separated, and the outcome of the trial will be struck squarely upon its end by something. It is bent into the shape of an attenuated "S," and after the accident the end that was struck—and that should have been lying directly against the end of the solid span—was lying eighteen inches away from its normal place.

This afternoon, immediately after the examination of the bridge, Coroner Gaspari was asked the direct question: "What, in your opinion, caused that rail to be struck and torn away?"

"From what I have seen, I think the rail was not in its place," he replied. "It had been pulled down and was riding into its confining box, but was riding upon one edge of the box. I am determined that if this was so we will learn the reason why. Of course, the wheels or the axle, or the end of the axle, but I cannot understand how. They will be raised, the railroad men tell me, and get cables around them."

Flange Is Not Broken.

When the first car was lifted from the bottom by the wrecking derrick its front wheels and trucks were attached to the body, but they slipped back into the water. There was a report among the spectators who were standing on the bridge that no flange was broken. But of this no one could be sure.

Beyond a doubt, however, the accident will cost the Pennsylvania Railroad an enormous sum in damage suits and settlements, for it seems certain that some defect in the bridge equipment or the cars' running gear was responsible for the catastrophe.

A point which Coroner Gaspari has already brought out appears to be the railroad. One of the first things that he and all the other spectators noticed was that no part of the bridge over the Throughfare was equipped with "guard rails"—rails inside those upon which trains run—that are used on nearly all bridges and curves to prevent trains from running wild, even if they do leave their tracks.

"I do not know whether the laws of New Jersey say that all railroad bridges shall be equipped with guard rails," the coroner said, this afternoon, "but I intend to have the matter looked up carefully before the jury. I know that every bridge with which I am familiar has them, and they are one of the reasonable precautions which I believe the law says shall be applied by railroads."

The inquiry will be held on Thursday. To-day the jurors, according to the way law requirements, had to go through the ghastly form of examining every body so far recovered.

ART LEAGUE IN COURT

Anthony Comstock Resumes Prosecution of Girl.

CATALOGUE AGAIN ATTACKED

Attorney for Artist Body Says He Asked to Have Name of Male Member Substituted for Miss Riebley, but Comstock Refused to Make the Change—Listeners Are Amused.

New York, Oct. 29.—Anthony Comstock appeared at the West Side Police Court to-day to continue the prosecution of Anna Riebley, the young woman book-keeper whom he accuses of assisting in the circulation of the June catalogue of the Art Students' League, containing pictures of a man and woman without any clothes.

The case was thrashed out several weeks ago in the Jefferson Market Police Court. It was agreed between Comstock and Lawrence E. Crowley, representing the league, that the name of the girl in the case should not be mentioned, and that for convenience, since her connection in the affair was purely technical, she should be called Miss Robinson. Comstock did not keep his part of the bargain.

Shortly before the hearing to-day Comstock said he had no intention to prosecute Miss Robinson personally.

"I want to get at the sneaking hounds behind this woman's skirts," he said dramatically. "I know that more than a thousand of these circulars have been sent to young unmarried women, and can produce as evidence at least forty-four names of them. In brief, I want to say the person I'm after is the employer of the girl."

Comstock Never Smiles.

Throughout the proceedings most of the listeners laughed frequently. Comstock never smiled.

Mr. Crowley started the fun by declaring that the complainant had specifically stated at the last meeting that he had finished with Miss Robinson, therefore she was not present. This took a rise out of Comstock. He wanted the young lady brought to court immediately.

"I want to reopen this case to bring the real offender forth. Miss Robinson must be present. I want to relieve her of being put in the position of having sent out these catalogues. If there is a man, here responsible, let him come forth," shouted Comstock.

Wants Man's Name Substituted.

No one volunteered, but Mr. Crowley declared that at the time the warrant was issued he pleaded with Comstock to substitute the name of a male member of the league for that of the young woman.

Comstock, he declared, said that the papers were made out and could not be changed.

At this juncture Magistrate Mayo took occasion to reprimand the lawyer for neglecting to apply "Mister" when referring to the complainant. The lawyer complied with the request without further protest. Crowley said he objected to a continuation of the proceedings, because it was merely a "fishing expedition" on the part of Comstock to get more evidence. He said it was unfair to subject Miss Robinson to what the lawyer termed badgering.

Comstock thought that the book was at this statement and Crowley apologized, stating he only referred to the contemptible manner in which she was questioned.

"An able," Comstock said, "to prove that there was a sale and delivery of this literature. Subscription blanks were sent out, and one of the inducements offered to purchasers was that for every subscription six months' numbers would be sent free. I can show that the book was not issued for art purposes, but for advertising purposes and gain. Thousands of them were sent to misses—not men or married women, but young girls."

He insisted that the case could not go on without the presence of the defendant, and also asked that Miss M. J. Mercereau and Miss Catherine Farrington, two other employees, be summoned.

Orders Girl to Be Present.

"We all have the most profound sympathy," said Magistrate Mayo, "for the young woman, and regret the position in which she is technically placed, but I suggest that she should be here in accordance with legal requirements. There will be no badgering or badgering—and I repeat the statement that there was last time. She will receive the most respectful consideration."

Comstock then said he would cease all proceedings until the book was taken into action if the Art League would consent to give an order to the district attorney to destroy the matter seized. The Art League present only smirked.

Mr. Crowley caused considerable amusement to the spectators by refusing to give Comstock the correct spelling of the names of the Misses Farrington and Mercereau. Comstock grew irritated, and it was only after Magistrate Mayo pleaded with the lawyer for the sake of convenience to give them that it was forthcoming.

HAAKON'S SPEECH RESENTED.

Radicals of Norway's Storthing Angered by King's Address.

Christiania, Oct. 29.—King Haakon's speech opening Parliament will be the subject of a debate which is expected to bring about a crisis in Norway's cabinet. Premier Michelson's speech in the Storthing was a direct challenge to the Radicals. He said the cabinet was unable to collaborate with this group, but asked the co-operation of all the moderate elements.

The speech, which was approved by all the cabinet members, has greatly angered the Radicals, and is now being discussed by the organization of the left wing. Whether the cabinet stays or quits depends upon whether this organization splits or sticks together.

ACTRESS COMMITS SUICIDE.

Hazel Cooper, Poor and Ill, Resorts to Poison.

New York, Oct. 29.—Without funds and discouraged by a long struggle to regain her health, Hazel Cooper, twenty-four years old, formerly a member of the "Earl and the Girl" company, drank poison in her apartment at the Hotel Hamilton, at 122 West Forty-fifth street, last night and died at 4 o'clock this morning in Roosevelt Hospital.

Some time ago the young woman was forced to discontinue her work on the stage because of poor health, and was unable to obtain any other kind of employment. Finally her funds gave out. She left the hotel, but returned about two weeks ago. Yesterday she talked about taking her own life, and her friends decided to watch her for fear that she really would carry out her threats.

It was with this intention that a friend, Mrs. J. L. Lundy, who has apartment on the same floor, spent yesterday afternoon and evening with her. For a large part of the time the girl was weeping and old letters and seemed depressed and very much discouraged.

About 10:30 o'clock she threw herself on her bed and apparently fell asleep. Her companion, thinking that she had an opportunity to get supper, went out. She returned, however, she heard music coming from the bathroom and rushing in she found her friend writing on the floor. At her side was a broken bottle which had contained a poisonous antiseptic solution, the basis of which was carbolic acid.

By the time Dr. Lee, of the Roosevelt Hospital, arrived she was unconscious and could not be revived. She was removed to the hospital, where futile efforts were made to save her life. It is said that she was married to a jockey, but that she had not been living with him for a time. It is also said that she had been employed to him several times for funds to meet her expenses, but that she refused her requests. It is said that only recently she made a fresh appeal, but was unsuccessful.

BOYS ATTACK OFFICER.

Twenty-eight Youthful Criminals Make Dash for Liberty.

Chicago, Oct. 29.—Twenty-eight boys held in the juvenile detention home, 255 West Adams street, made a bold attempt to gain their liberty to-day by attacking the policeman guard and knocking him down with a chair. A riot call was sent out, and the boys were taken to the station, where they were held in a room.

The trouble, it is charged, was started by Edward Coleman, sixteen years old, said to be the son of a patrolman. He is accused of sneaking out of the building, reaching the street, and taking a train for Oak Park, where he was arrested. Patrolman O'Neill, who was attacked, was rescued after he had been painfully injured. Four of the boys, said to be ring-leaders, were locked up at the Desplaines street station.

MILLIONAIRES ARE INSANE.

Sister Receives $100,000 for Their Care and Maintenance.

White Plains, N. Y., Oct. 29.—Under an order of Supreme Court Justice Dickey, filed at White Plains to-day, Miss Cecilia de Notbeck, as committee of the estates of her sister and brother, Miss Gabriel de Notbeck and Peter de Notbeck, relatives of the late John Jacob Astor, the first, and both lunatics, is to receive $100,000 for the care and comfortable maintenance of the incompetents.

On October 19, a certified jury declared both Gabriel and Peter de Notbeck insane and incompetent to manage an estate valued at about $2,000,000, which they inherited from their mother, who died several months ago, and who had also been declared insane. Both incompetents are childish, and have been inmates of a sanatorium at Fishkill-on-the-Hudson for twenty years.

According to the papers on file, the lunatics are in good health, and in comfortable care, and the employment of nurses, attendants, and servants.

ST. LOUIS SHORTAGE GROWS.

Measures Taken to Prevent Theft Gives Rise to New Theory.

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 29.—The installation of opaque glass frames over the wire of the tellers' cages in the United States subtreasury began to-day.

Assistant Treasurer Bantz and Chief Clerk are credited with the improvement, which T. J. Atkins, in charge of the subtreasury, recommended a year ago. The openness of the cages has given rise to the theory that an outsider, by manipulation of wire instruments, stole the missing funds.

SEE A DEMOCRATIC HOUSE.

Chairman Griggs at Work on His Election Forecast.

Chairman James G. Griggs, of the Democratic Congressional committee, is preparing his forecast of the probable results at next Tuesday's election.

He will, of course, predict that the Democrats will carry the next House. Griggs will claim a majority of at least twenty-four, and possibly thirty. The last time Mr. Griggs made a prediction he claimed the House for his party by about fifty. The Republicans captured it by 112.

In the Griggs forecast this year it will be stated that Candidate Hearst will carry New York, thus insuring a gain of members in the State. In Pennsylvania Mr. Griggs expects the State capital scandal to cut a figure in the election.

Idea to Abandon Published-letter and Will Depend Upon Mr. Root's Speech at Utica.

President Roosevelt, Secretary Root, and Postmaster General Cortelyou had a long conference at the White House yesterday morning on the political situation.

It is understood the chief question under consideration was just what course the administration ought to pursue in regard to the campaign, and whether or not it would be well for the President to write a letter bearing on the fight that might be made public.

No announcement was made as to the decision reached, but the understanding is that the letter idea was abandoned, and that it would be left to Secretary Root to outline the attitude of the administration in his speech Thursday night at Utica.

Mr. Root is preparing his address now, and in all probability will embody in it such ideas as the President would have expressed had it been decided to give out a letter.

Mr. Cortelyou was able to give both the President and the Secretary of State a comprehensive estimate of the needs of the New York situation, as he just returned Sunday night from a visit of several days to New York. While there he was in constant touch with the State leaders, and devoted all his time to the gubernatorial fight. The Congressional campaign, in fact, was almost entirely ignored, as the Republicans feel confident on that score, and realize the whole force and resources of the organization must be directed toward the election of Hughes.

It is too much to say the Republican managers do not think they are gaining, but it is not an exaggeration to state they are greatly worried because they are so uncertain. They cannot convince themselves the fight is won; they cannot make an estimate of Hearst's strength that is satisfying even to themselves.

Probably never before in the history of the party has the hope of carrying a majority of seats for the Democratic party in the Northern strongholds, and declared that the next House would show either a Democratic majority, as he hoped, or a Republican one, as he feared. He added that it was difficult to gauge the sentiment in many places, especially in New York, but he thought that Hearst is gaining ground as the campaign nears its climax.

Democratic Change of Front Regarding Roosevelt Subject of Attack.
